"Lady Easton's Secret"

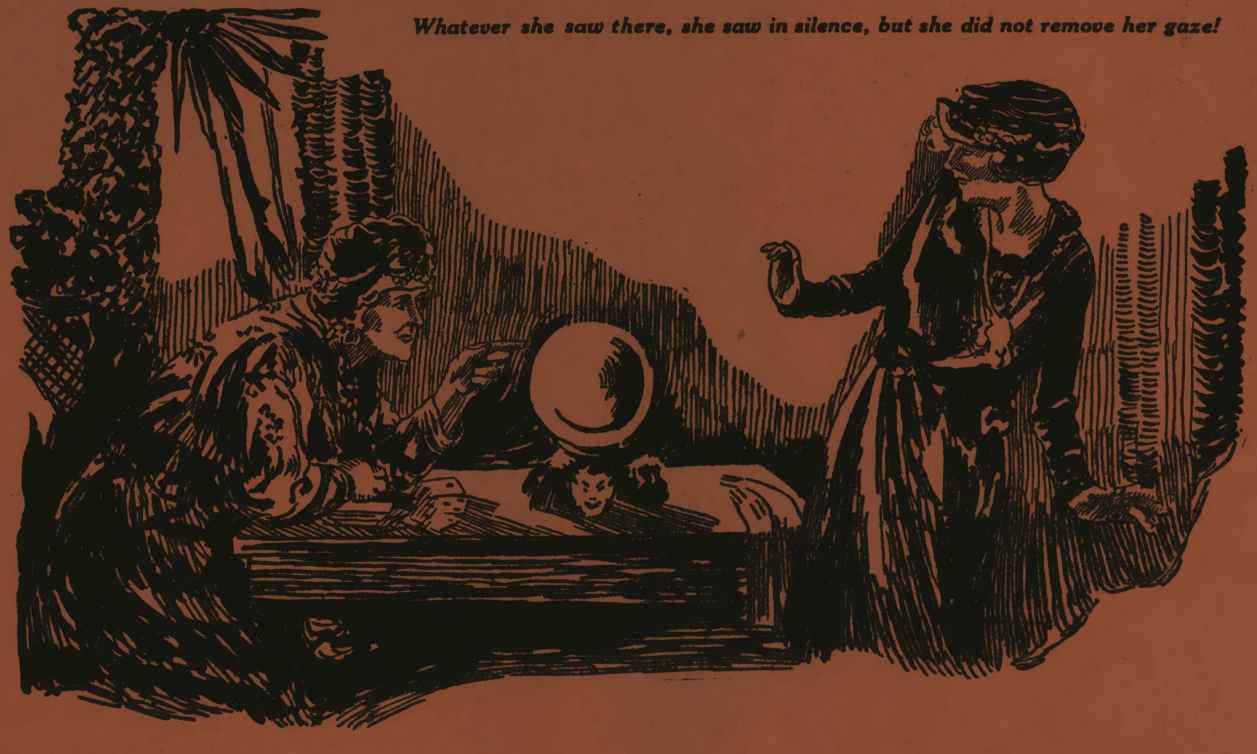
By LILLIAN QUILLER COUCH

WHEN young Arthur Cheselby saves Cecily Mount from drowning, she is convinced that she has discovered the one man in the world who can change her from a cold, heartless girl into a woman worthy of his love. She consents to an engagement, but insists that it be kept a secret. Just a year from the date of her engagement, Lord Poldare proposes to her. In a battle between her heart and her ambition, it seems inevitable that young Cheselby's love will be flouted. At this crisis lovely Evelyn Atwood appears upon the scene.

She cannot know that Cheselby has sworn, should Cecily throw him over, to marry the first woman who does him a kindness. Cecily comes to his rescue in a battle with a street mob. She is not only womanly, tender and sympathetic, but courageous. From this moment, around the three principal characters in a dramatic novel of love and matchless intrigue, is waged an intense emotional conflict. Will Cecily marry the man she loves? Or will she sacrifice love to her passion for a title? If she marries Poldare, must Evelyn become a victim to Cheselby's outraged pride? For he has vowed to marry the first woman who does him a kindness, and Evelyn has been kind to him. What is the strange mystery involving Evelyn Atwood and Lord Poldare? He has called at her lodgings, and as he is a man of many intrigues, without virtue of any sort, or principle, it would be certain to damage the reputation of a young girl if the fact were discovered. Whether he ever met her at her lodgings or not, Poldare's evil shadow has fallen across her path.

Lillian Quiller Couch's reputation as a novelist is international. This thrilling romance is easily the best novel she has ever written. So lovable a character as Evelyn is certain to win the sympathy of the reader. Will Arthur Cheselby's casual meeting with her, and Poldare's evident pursuit of her, mar her chance of happiness?

The year 1922 will be a big year for JOURNAL readers. Serials by the well known author, Agnes Louise Provost, have been secured, novels as fascinating as "THE SHADOW BETWEEN" and "THE MYSTERY GIRL OF LONE PINE." This absorbing romance, "LADY EASTON'S SECRET," is only one of the book-length novels offered to JOURNAL subscribers for less than the cost of a single novel in book form.



Whatever she saw there, she saw in silence, but she did not remove her gaze!

JUVENILE PETTICOATS GET THEIR BIT OF ATTENTION.

With Spring so near, and the little miss soon changing from flannels and serges to ginghams and voiles, the mother with forsight now plans under garments. Semi-princess, with straight lines, yet enough fullness for comfort, and of only four pieces of cloth, the model below is easily and quickly made. For an eight year old girl 1¾ yards of 32-inch material are needed. Batiste, cotton crepe, or or nainsook of white, with scallops and neck and armholes bound with blue or pink bias binding, would make a dainty and useful model. For the older girl the camisole top is more appropriate. Perforations on diagram show where to cut pattern. Size 14 years requires 2½ yards of 32-inch material and one yard of ribbon for shoulder straps. As a foundation for the communion or graduation frock, wash satin or crepe de shine could be used. Ruffles of lace or embroidery might take the place of the scallops at the bottom of the skirt. Full instructions for making and further instructions for trimming and finishing will be found on the inside of the envelope.

A Tuck is a fold of material stitched through both thicknesses of the fold.

A Plait is a fold of material stitched through both thicknesses of the fold, and through the material also. When tucks are allowed in pattern, follow these directions. To make small or pin tucks: Mark line of eyelets as given on pattern (Fig. 1a). Fold material on marked line and sew with running-stitch, or on machine, ⅛ inch from folded edge for each small tuck (Fig. 1b), or as close to the folded edge as possible for each pin tuck (Fig. 1c). To make larger tucks mark lines of eyelets as given on pattern, following method shown at Fig. 1a. Bring lines of corresponding eyelets together, and sew through lines by hand or on machine (Fig. 2). To make Crosswise or Nun Tucks follow directions given for larger tucks, unless the skirt has angles, or is slightly circular. In that case hold under side of tuck a little full, or run a shirring thread to distribute the fulness evenly (Fig. 3d). When the pattern is not perforated, and one must allow for tucks, care must be taken that the length and width are correct, and that the tucks are the correct distance apart, and lie in the right directions. Mark, and cut a notch in a piece of cardboard the exact width of tuck desired. Then mark the width desired between the finished tuck and the next tuck. Fig. 3e shows person using the cardboard gage in making nun tucks.

Graduated Tucks are made in same manner as plain tucks, only each tuck is increased or decreased in size (Fig. 8). Group Tucks are made in same manner as plain tucks, except that a space is left between each group of tucks (Fig. 7).

Side-Plaits — Mark lines of eyelets as given on pattern (Fig. 4f). Fold on lines of small eyelets, lap folded edges to meet lines of medium eyelets, and sew through the three thicknesses of material (Fig. 4g).

A Box-Plait is a fold turned in both directions from a center line. Proceed as for larger tucks (Fig. 5h). Press plait open so that center line is directly over line of stitching (Fig. 5j). In making Inverted Plaits the folded edges of the plaits meet on the right side of the material, giving a box-plait effect on the under side. Fig. 6k shows folded edge of one side of plait lapped to center line of eyelets and sewed to place. The opposite folded edge is being lapped to meet at center. Fig. 6l shows finished inverted plait.

Tuck Cording—Make a tuck just wide enough to cover the cord that is to be used, and after tuck is finished draw the cord through. When the line is shaped or the material is such that the tuck can not be made first, insert the cord while making the tuck with running stitches (Fig. 9).

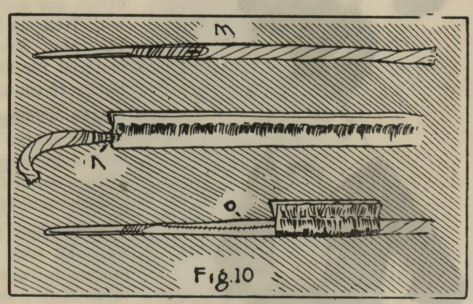

Fig.10

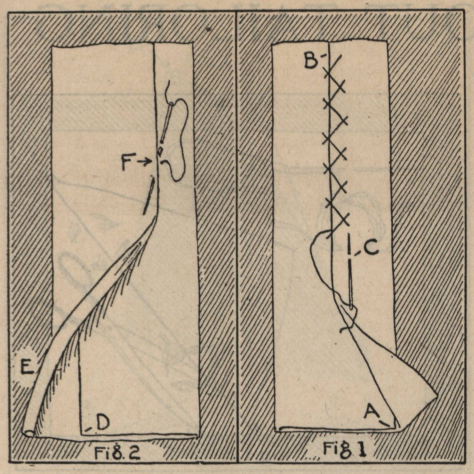
To Cover Cable Cord—Sew a bodkin to the end of the cord which is to be covered (Fig. 10m). Cut bias strips wide enough to cover cord, allowing for seams. Join bias strips to make length desired. Fold strip in center, wrong side out, and stitch a sufficient distance from folded edge to allow cord to be inserted. Fasten bodkin to one end of stitched strip (Fig. 10n). Then draw the bias strip right side out over the cable cord by pushing the bodkin and drawing the strip over the cord (Fig. 10o).



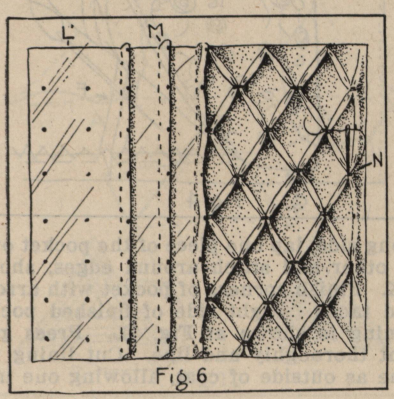
MILLINERS' BAND AND FOLD

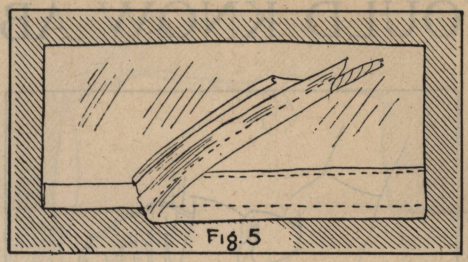
To Make Band—Cut a strip of material, either on the straight or the bias, cutting it two and one-half times the width of the finished band. Make a double fold the desired width of the finished band (Fig. 1A). Fold over the remaining edge, which should be one-half the width of the double band, shown at B. Catch stitch raw edge of second fold, being careful not to take stitches through more than two thicknesses of the material, as at C.

To Make Fold—Cut a bias strip three times the width of desired fold. Fold under one-third of its width (see Fig. 2D). Make a narrow underturning on the opposite edge, shown at E. Bring over the edge of the turning to cover the raw edges of the fold, and finish with invisible slip stitches as shown at F.

SMOCKING

To Make Plain Smocking—Stamp material with a smocking design, or dot at regular intervals as shown Fig. 6L. Fold on each row of dots and baste tucks ⅛ inch from folded edge as at M. Begin at top of first and second rows of tucks and catch the edge of tucks together with two or three overcasting stitches taken exactly over each other. Carry needle downward under first tuck, skipping one row of dots. Bring trucks together at next rows of dots and take overcasting stitches. Continue this process until first and second tucks are joined together, then join the second tuck to the third in the same manner. Be careful to start the joining of the second and third rows of tucks at the second rows of dots. This will make the overcasting stitches come on the alternate rows of dots (see N). When smocking is finished remove basting that formed tucks. Smocking is particularly suitable for children's garments and forms a very effective trimming. Embroidery cotton in fast colors should be used on garments that are to be laundered.

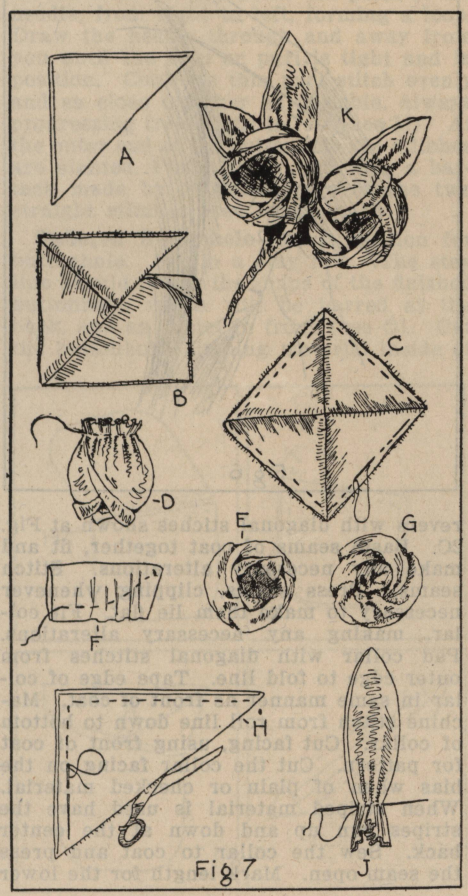


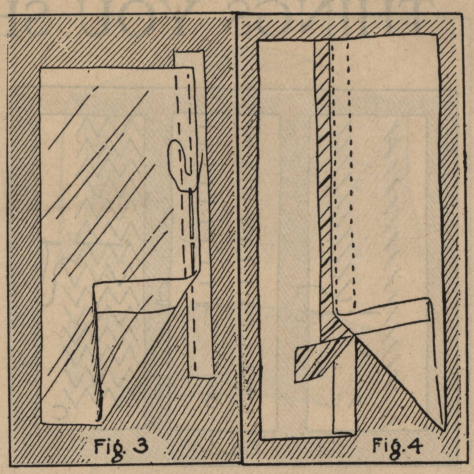


HOME-MADE ROSES

These roses are now seen on many of the imported afternoon and evening gowns, and while they are very expensive to buy, they are really quite simple to make. They can be made from small pieces, and different colors can be combined, thus enabling one to use the leftovers from the scrap-bag.

Taffeta, crepe-de-chine, light weight satins, chiffon, gold and silver tissue, also organdie and swiss, may be used. The follow directions and the diagrams at Fig. 7 will enable any one to make them. Cut four six-inch squares of material for each rose, fold each square of material in a triangle (see diagram A). Place the four pieces together, the fold of each to the center, and each piece overlapping the other, shown at Diagrams B and C. Run a gathering thread along the outer raw edge. Draw up to form a flower at in Diagram D. Fold back each edge as in E. Cut a small strip of material for center. Fold and gather raw edge (see Diagram F). Slip inside of the flower, and tack to place, Diagram G. Make leaves in the following manner: Cut squares of the material and fold to form triangle. Sew outer edges and cut center fold, Diagram H. Turn right side out and plait cut edges, shaping them like a leaf (see Diagram J). Attach roses and leaves to wire stem and form in clusters. See Diagram K for finished cluster of roses.





TO MAKE PIPING

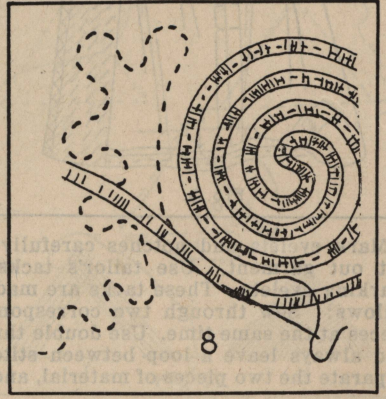
Piping is a narrow fold and may be cut on the straight, or on the bias of the material. It may be used to trim edges of garment or inserted between the seams.

To Insert Piping in Seams cut piping twice the width desired plus one-half inch. Thus, if you wish to use one-half inch pipings, cut strips of material one and one-half inches wide by length required. Fold piping in center and baste along folded edge. Fold seam allowance, on upper edge of seam, to wrong side of garment and baste piping to this edge, allowing piping to extend width desired beyond folded edge (Fig. 3). Fold seam allowance on under edge of seam to right side of garment. Place edge to which the piping has been basted over this second edge, baste and stitch (Fig. 4).

Corded Piping—Make piping width desired and draw cable cord or yarn through the stitched fold (Fig. 5). Use cord for heavy weight material and matching yarn in sheer material.

SOUTACHE BRAID

Applying Soutache Braid—To sew soutache on flat, use running stitches through the center of the braid. When turning corners stretch the braid on the outside of corner and sew it down closely on the inside. To sew it on a curve hold the braid so that it will gather a little on the inside curve, and use blind stitching on the outside of the curve, as in (Fig. 8). To cut the braid, about one-half inch should be allowed and after making a hole push this end through the material and fasten with a few stitches. To apply soutache in raised effect, blind stitch one edge of the braid to the design. The wider widths of soutache may be used for the grille or lattice work that is such a popular form of dress trimming at present. Cut material away under latticed band and trim each side of band with straight rows of braid.



THINGS YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT TAILORING

Good tailoring depends upon fitting, basting, stitching and pressing. Press, press, press is the tailor's motto. If the home sewer can stitch accurately and fit fairly well, there is no reason why she should not make simple tailor-made garments if she will learn to baste thoroughly, stitch and press, press and stitch. The average sewer tries to finish a garment and then press it into shape. The tailor presses and shapes the garment before he stitches it. After a garment is finished, if possible have it pressed by the tailor. But it should have been pressed many times while in the process of construction. To prepare garment material for tailoring it should be shrunk (unless it is silk or velvet), so that the pressing can be done without spotting the cloth. If the material is of such a light weight that it requires an interlining, it is best to shrink the interlining, also the cotton tape used for staying the edge of coats and jackets.

To Make a Tailored Coat or Jacket—Test pattern and make any necessary alterations. Place pattern on material correctly, then with tailors' chalk mark an extra margin of ⅜ or ½ inch at neck and armhole edges. It is always best to allow this extra material, as these edges sometimes are stretched or drawn from the numerous pressings during the process of making.

Mark eyelets and notches carefully and cut out garment. Use tailor's tacks for marking eyelets. These tacks are made as follows: Sew through two corresponding pieces at the same time. Use double thread, and always leave a loop between stitches. Separate the two pieces of material, and cut the threads between (see Fig. 1). If entire coat is to be interlined lay the underside of the cut pieces of the coat over the interlining material and baste coat pieces to interlining. Then cut out interlining, following shape of coat pieces. When heavy material is used it will not be necessary to interline entire coat. Use front of coat as pattern and cut an interlining about five inches wide, extending the upper part to meet the shoulder seam. Cut a piece to fit the armhole edges and another for the back of the neck. Baste pieces to coat with diagonal basting stitches (see Fig. 2, A and B). Baste narrow tape along front edges of coat over the interlining. If there are revers on front of coat baste a strip of tape where coat folds back to form revers. Pad revers with diagonal stiches shown at Fig. 2C. Baste seams of coat together, fit and make any necessary alterations. Stitch seams. Press seams, clipping whenever necessary to make them lie flat. Fit collar, making any necessary alterations. Pad collar with diagonal stitches from outer edge to fold line. Tape edge of collar in same manner as front of coat. Machine stitch from roll line down to bottom of collar. Cut facing, using front of coat for pattern. Cut the collar facing on the bias when of plain or checked material. When striped material is used have the stripes run up and down at the center back. Sew the collar to coat and press the seam open. Mark length for the lower edge of coat and trim evenly. Cut a one-inch bias strip of cambric for stay and baste to wrong side of lower edge of coat. Machine stitch lower edge of coat and stay together. Turn edge of coat under and baste (Fig. 3E). Set sleeves in armholes, being careful to keep the fulness evenly distributed. Shrink fulness out in following manner: Slip the sleeve over the small end of a tailor's cushion, lay a damp cloth over gathers and press carefully (Fig. 5), turn under outer edges of coat and collar and catch stitch to place (Fig. 3D). Finish lower edge of sleeves in same manner as lower edge of coat. Pin front facing to inside of coat and baste carefully. Baste collar facing to front facing at corresponding neck edges. Seam edges and press open. Turn under edges of facings even with edge of coat and baste carefully (Fig. 6). Finish with invisible stitches or machine stich these edges. The coat is now ready for lining unless pockets are desired. For Set-in Pockets: Mark and cut slit for pocket opening. Cut two pocket pieces. Place right side of pocket pieces against right side of coat and sitch ⅜ inch from edge of opening (Fig. 7H). Turn pieces to wrong side, shown at J. Turn to right side and stitch around opening, pushing upper piece of pocket back while stitching lower edge of opening. Turn back to wrong side, lap one piece of the pocket over the other and stitch around edges, shown at K. Finish corners of pocket with arrowhead tacks. Right side of finished pocket opening is shown at Fig. 7L. Press garment thoroughly and line. Cut lining the same as outside of coat, allowing one inch

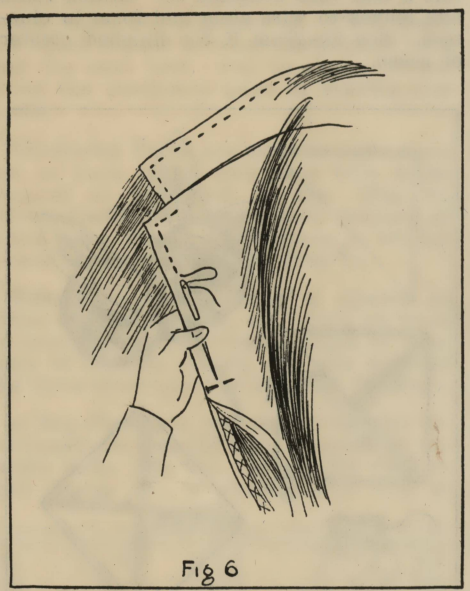

Fig 6

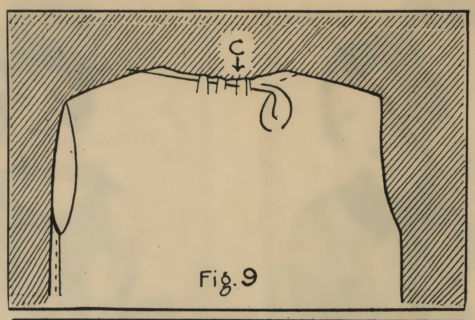

Fig. 9

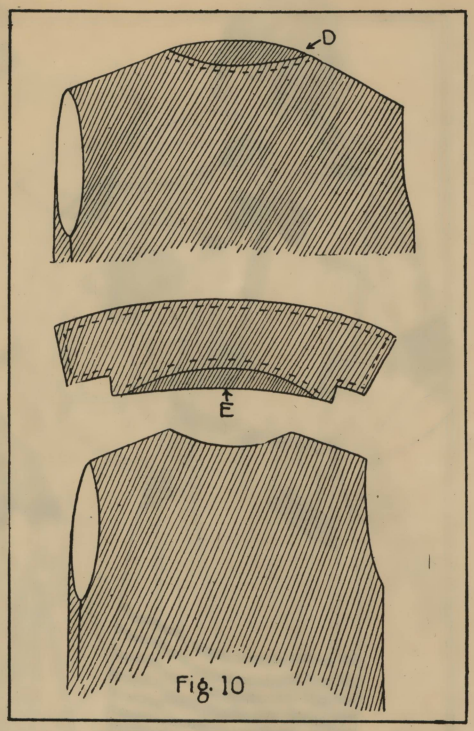

Fig. 10

extra for fulness at center back. Join seams and press open, clipping them to make them lay flat. Place wrong side of lining against wrong side of coat and tack seams together lightly (Fig. 4F). Turn in edges of lining and hem to place (Fig. 4G).

ORNAMENTAL TACKS

The Crow's-foot—Mark the shape of the crow's-foot with tailors' chalk or thread. Begin at lower left hand corner. Take a very short, straight stitch across the top point (Fig. 11, Diagram A). Take a very short stitch across the lower right hand point, shown at Diagram B. Take a short, straight stitch across the lower left hand point, Diagram C. Continue taking each stitch just inside of and below the previous one, Diagram D. The completed crow's-foot is shown at Diagram E.

The Arrowhead—Outline a triangle on material. Bring thread out at lower left hand corner. Take a short, straight stitch under top point of arrowhead (Fig. 12, Diagram F). Take a straight stitch underneath base, bringing the point of the needle out at the right of and as near as possible to the place where the thread was first brought through (see Diagram G). Take a short, straight stitch underneath top point. Place needle so that this stitch comes outside the stitches first made, Diagram H. Carry thread downward to right-hand end of arrowhead. Take a stitch underneath base, keeping this stitch inside of stitches previously made. The stitches at the top of the work are all taken outside of the previous stitches, while the stitches at the base are taken inside of all preceding stitches, Diagram J. For finished arrowhead, see Diagram K.

Buttonholes—Mark and cut slit for buttonhole. Begin at the end farthest from the edge of the garment and make two straight stitches across the end. Overcast slit all around (see Fig. 13, Diagram L). Work buttonhole stitches over the overcasting as follows: Make a stitch through the slash, taking up about ⅛ inch of material on the edge nearest you. Keep the needle pointed towards you and pass the thread from the eye under the point of the needle, from right to left, forming a loop. Draw the needle through and away from you until the loop or purl is tight and in position. Continue this purl stitch evenly and as close together as possible, always progressing from right to left (see M). At the outer end of the buttonhole the stitches are slanted. Finish inner end with a bar-tack made by buttonholing over the two straight stitches (see Diagram N).

Tailored Buttonhole—Mark position for buttonhole. Put in a stay line. The stay line should follow the shape of the finished buttonhole, which will be barred at the back, and an eyelet in front (see O). Cut the buttonhole, clipping material inside of eyelet. For a very firm edge use a small round tailors' braid or a few strands of waxed thread, catch to cut edge of buttonhole (see Diagram P). Then work buttonhole as previously described, using a stiletto to shape eyelet at front. Finish inner end of buttonhole with a bar-tack. The finished buttonhole is shown at Diagram Q.

WHEN COAT COLLAR DOES NOT FIT

Sometimes a coat collar, instead of setting closely into the back of the neck, stands away as in Fig. 8A. This is generally caused by one of these three reasons: The coat is too wide across the shoulders, or it is cut out too deeply in center back at neck edge, or the back neck edge may have been stretched in the course of making the garment. Remove the collar and measure neck edge. If the neck edge measures more than 4½ or 5 inches, open the shoulder seams and take deeper seams from back edges only, shown at Fig. 8B. If the neck edge has been stretched very slightly it can sometimes be remedied without opening the shoulder seam. Run a gathering thread along the upper back edges holding in extra fulness (see Fig. 9C). If the coat neck has been cut out too much build it up in back with a small piece of material (Fig. 10D). Where the collar is joined to neck edge and rolled over this piecing will be hidden. If the collar is very narrow at back it is best to join the piece of material to the neck edge of the collar, instead of to the coat, to prevent piecing from showing (Fig. 10E).

THE PEOPLE'S HOME JOURNAL

THE PEOPLE'S HOME JOURNAL was established in 1885, thirty-seven years ago. It has now nearly 1,000,000 subscribers. It is

"A Magazine for Every Member of the Family"

Its fiction is clean and wholesome, interesting, exciting and satisfying.

During the coming year the JOURNAL will publish at least three and possibly four Book-Length Novels—stories which will cost readers from $1.50 to $1.75 each when published in book form. There will be from $7.50 to $10.00 worth of fiction in these stories alone and our readers will get it all for the price of a single subscription.

There are in addition many departments offering authoritative personal service to subscribers in the solution of household problems; hundreds of Practical, Seasonable Recipes are printed on the Cookery Pages conducted by C. Houston Goudiss, nationally recognized as an expert on food; while each issue also includes pages of Needlework, illustrated with designs including simple directions for Crocheting, Knitting or Embroidering the beautiful patterns. Other pages show the newest modes for Smart Clothes and Fashions in the latest Ready-to-Wear Designs, and still other pages are devoted to Home-Building and Decoration.

There is an important department, conducted by Marianna Wheeler, Devoted to a Class for Mothers on "The Care of Children," also a "Class for Prospective Mothers." Children are attracted by an unrivalled page conducted by Thornton W. Burgess. Burgess is the creator of the Green Meadow Club and the famous Bedtime Stories, and is the most popular and widely read author of Children's Stories in America to-day!

A beautiful Gravure Section and numerous illustrations in color enhance the pictorial effect of the magazine. In addition to splendid articles on subjects of world wide interest many issues contain photographs depicting the most important current events.

We believe we can say truthfully that no other magazine is in such close, intimate touch with its readers as is
